Chapter 1 by Samuel

Yesterday the first bomb dropped, North Korea dropped many bombs on Anchorage, Alaska. The US retaliated, with NATO backing him. While China, Russia, India and most of Asia backed North Korea. Or should I say, Korea, because there's no South Korea by now.

Japan is in severe danger right now. It's being bombarded by Chinese and Russian planes. While hostile fleets are already surrounding some of it's cities. They're undecided if they should fight or retreat.

Venezuela backed North Korea and allies. And a coalition of Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay was formed. The 'Southern Western Powers', or the SWP. They're are looking for support from Peru and Chile. But Chile is looking for a neutral alliance with Oceania. While Colombia threatens to back North Korea.

Europe is pretty much undecided. Only France and the UK decided to support the US, due to their historical friendship. The Nordic Council decided to remain neutral. Neutral but defensive, in the threat of a possible Russian invasion.

In Africa, only South Africa has decided to support the US. The rest of the continent hasn't made an official announcement yet.
